

www.belleoflouisville.org

Promotions Photo Galleries
see people doin' stuff... click here

About LEO Contact Us Forums Advertising

- ▶ Home
- ▶ A&E Listings
- ▶ Community Listings
- ▶ Writers' Blogs
- ▶ News / Features
- ▶ Opinion
- ▶ Arts & Entertainment
- ▶ Music
- ▶ Plugged In
- ▶ Concert
- Commuter
- ▶ Promotions
- ▶ Classifieds
- ▶ Image Galleries
- ▶ Advertising
- Info
- ▶ Distribution
- ▶ Past Issues
- ▶ Mobile Updates

OTHER

Sponsor!

Syndicate

XML

SEARCH LEO

search

Enclose phrases in double quotes ("").

Active forum

- . Voter Guide for Judges, Please!
- . First Friday Gallery Trolley Hop
- . Voces Novae Concert
- . Voces Novae New Favorite Artists?

more

MYLEO LOGIN

Username:

Password:

Log in

- . Create new account
- . Request new password

WHO'S ONLINE

There are currently 0 users and 432 guests online.

Staffpicks

By LEO Weekly

<MUSIC>

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 14

Mower

San Diego is a pristine town with hot blondes, high waves and stunning views, and that trifacta permits some laissez-faire indulgence: a perfect contrast to the city's progeny, Mower.

One-time tour partners of Hed (Pe) and Villebillies, the band's hardcore-metallic attack doesn't bounce and sway so much as punch and pound. "Something snaps with us when we start playing live," singer Brian Sheerin says. "It's unpredictable, and the show's different every time. All of our favorite bands are outrageous live bands; you just don't know what they're going to do next. I think we kind of took that to heart."

Together since the late '90s, the band is enjoying new attention for its aural assault on the likes of Sirius Satellite Radio, even if some media are a bit late to the party.

"As far as someone jumping on a song ... it's a real shot in the arm for the record," Sheerin says. "The fact that they don't censor is even better. That's the wave of the future."

Catch Mower in Fairdale at the Bulldog Café tonight. —Mat Herron

The Bulldog Café

10619 W. Manslick Road

380-0600

myspace.com/bulldogcafe

$10; 7 p.m.

<FILM>

Thursday, Nov. 15

'Into Great Silence'

As part of its Tournées Festival, the Bellarmine Film Association will show a series of French language films; the festival is free and open to the public. With only a few minutes of dialogue in the entire documentary, "Into Great Silence" is French language largely by technicality. It'll be shown Thursday evening at Pasteur Hall.

The film takes place among the Carthusians, an order of Catholic monks who live in a monastery nestled deep in the Alps. They're one of the most ascetic orders out there; they have a vow of silence that is only broken for chants, prayer and, if you've been there a while, about two hours of discussion every two weeks.

"Into Great Silence" does more than show the life of a Carthusian monk, it actually recreates the tranquil and contemplative nature of it. If you are able to surrender to it, this is probably the best film you will see this year. And it's as transformative an experience as movies can provide. —Alan Abbott

Small Science Theater, Pasteur Hall 102

Bellarmino University

473-3270

Free; 7 p.m.

<BENEFIT>

Thursday, Nov. 15

Backstreet Boys at Fourth Street Live

The Lambert and Lindsey morning show on 102.3 The Max once again is out to raise money for the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Kentucky, with a 36-hour, on-air marathon Nov. 15 and 16. But you know the old saying: Be careful what you wish for. This year, Lambert and Lindsey wished for an appearance by the reunited Backstreet Boys, and their wish came true, kind of. The Boys are back with a new album nearly 15 years after their debut, having sold more than 100 million albums worldwide, albeit most of them to swooning, prepubescent girls. Today, the Boys are sans one member — either the cute one or the cheeky one, we can't remember which — and are a lot older and, presumably, wiser. After word spread of the concert last week, an announcement came Friday that the show was canceled because a member in their backing band is out of town. This just in — the Boys will still show up Thursday, sans a performance. They'll be taking photos with fans, answering questions and so on. (Check

